INTRODUCTION

Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) or what is often referred to as social responsibility is a form of contribution that aims to pay attention to the environment and also the welfare of society, which will indirectly have an impact on the company and society. Until now there is no unified language regarding CSR, but empirically CSR has been implemented by companies in various forms of activities based on volunteerism.

In the context of statutory provisions, it turns out that there is no common language in formulating the meaning of CSR, this can be proven from the explanation of Article 15 letter b of Law Number 25 of 2007 concerning Capital Investment (UUPM) which confirms that corporate social responsibility is The responsibility inherent in every investment company is to create a relationship that is harmonious, balanced and by the environment, values, norms and culture of the local community. Article 1 point 3 of Law Number 40 of 2007 concerning Limited Companies (UUPT) also emphasizes that social and environmental responsibility is a company's commitment to participate in sustainable development to improve the quality of life and the environment which is beneficial, both for the company itself, local communities, and society in general (Busyra Azheri, 2012)

The implementation of corporate social responsibility by Sharia banking in Indonesia is increasing every year, both in quantity and quality. In terms of quantity, each Islamic bank allocates funds every year and shows an increase in the budget. This is reflected in the published annual financial reports. In terms of quality, the corporate social responsibility activities carried out also directly address and touch the basic needs of the community, and are carried out together with the community. Every year Sharia banking continues to make changes or innovations and create programs to respond to socio-economic changes and create a relationship of trust between Sharia banks and customers. In the end, a loyal relationship is formed between Sharia banks and customers. Therefore, in this case, the author will write about the form of implementing social responsibility accounting (Corporate Social Responsibility) in Islamic banks which is implemented in the journal.

RESULTS AND DISCUSSION

Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR)

Corporate social responsibility is a corporate responsibility that is a partnership, active and dynamic, between the company and the surrounding community. Social responsibility is a form of accountability that a company should carry out, for the positive and negative impacts arising from its operational activities, and may have some influence on internal and external communities within the company. Apart from carrying out profit-oriented activities, companies need to carry out other activities, for example, activities to provide a safe working environment for their employees, guarantee that the production process does not pollute the environment around the company, place workers honestly, produce products that are safe for consumers, and maintaining the external environment to realize corporate social awareness.

In this case, a Sharia bank is a state-owned company or a company in the form of a limited liability company (PT) that operates in the field of providing Sharia banking services which also carries out social responsibility activities to the community.
